EXPLANATORY NOTES

This Act contains various amendments to the Animal Health Protection Act.

A number of amendments are made to ensure the safety and welfare of animals. New requirements are imposed on animal owners and custodians regarding the premises in which animals are kept. If the Minister is of the opinion that the safety or welfare of an animal is in immediate danger, the Minister may order an animal owner or custodian for a period not exceeding 60 days to cease the owner's or the custodian's custody or some related activities or to exercise the custody or activities according to the conditions the Minister determines.

Provisions applying specifically to the safety and welfare of cats and dogs are introduced, including provisions requiring the owners or custodians of 15 or more animals, whether cats or dogs, to hold a permit. The Government's regulatory powers are expanded to allow it to establish rules applicable to the premises where those animals are kept, the persons who keep them, the activities exercised by those persons, the preventive measures they must put in place and the methods they may use to euthanize animals.

Fines are increased for contravening legislative or regulatory provisions regarding the safety and welfare of animals and for contravening provisions that apply more specifically to cats and dogs.

The Government is empowered to enter into an agreement with a first nation or a Native community or group on the special application of certain provisions to better reconcile the safety and welfare requirements of dogs with the activities of Native people.

The Government is authorized to provide, by regulation, that the custodian of an animal must register with the Minister.

The requirement that persons hold a permit in order to artificially inseminate an animal, keep animal sperm in their possession or deliver animal sperm to a third party is withdrawn.
